Barthes argues that to liberate a work from interpretive tyranny, the work must be separated from its creator. Instead, the essential meaning of a work depends on the impressions of the person or people interpreting it - whoever is in the role of the reader, the player, the audience, the viewer or anything similar. Barthes, To add some literary and interactive examples, let us briefly consider three works. Clever concept and surprising. Hat "Polina" for a Lady. The title should be at least 4 characters long.
